Distinguished Daughter Of Famous Publisher Named To Head Newspaper Founded By Grandfather

Mrs. Ruth Sulzberger Golden was named as publisher of The Chattanooga Times and president of The Times Printing Company, owner of the morning newspaper.

The selection was announced by the company's board at a meeting in New York, says the New York Times. The board reported it had accepted the resignation of Ben Hale Golden, her husband, from both positions.

Mrs. Golden filed suit for a divorce in Chattanooga, Tennessee. The couple had been married on June 1, 1946. Mr. Golden, who was elected president of the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association last November 17, continues as a director of The Times Printing Company.

Mrs. Golden had been a vice-president of The Chattanooga Times since March 24, 1960. She has been a member of the board of directors of The New York Times Company since April 25, 1961.

As a publisher, she joins such women as Mrs. Dorothy Schiff, editor in chief and publisher of The New York Post; Mrs. Katharine Graham, president of The Washington Post; and Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, president and editor of The Houston Post.

Other distinguished women publishers have included the late Alicia Patterson, editor and publisher of Newsday, a daily on Long Island, N. Y., and the late Eleanor Medill (Cissy) Patterson, editor-publisher of The Washington Times-Herald.

Mrs. Golden is the granddaughter of the late Adolph S. Ochs, publisher of the Chattanooga Times from 1878 to 1935 and publisher of The New York Times from 1896 to 1935. She is the daughter of Arthur Hays Sulzberger, chairman of the board of both The New York Times Company and The Times Printing Company in Chattanooga, says the New York Times. Her brother, Arthur Ochs Sulzberger, is publisher of The New York Times.

In a statement for the editorial page of The Chattanooga Times, Mrs. Golden said:

"It is traditional for a new publisher of a newspaper to make a statement on the day this responsibility is assumed. I do so now to emphasize that more than just these words obey tradition. The Chattanooga Times continues under the direction of the same family that has guided its path since 1878.

"I was born into the Sulzberger-Ochs family, and am deeply committed to the quality of journalism that these two names have come to exemplify in the publishing world. It will be my earnest endeavor that The Chattanooga Times shall serve this area in every way that a responsible newspaper can, mindful always that it shall 'give the news impartially, without fear or favor, regardless of any party, sect, or interests involved.'"

Following the board meeting, Mrs. Golden designated William C. McKenzie, who has been business manager since March, 1958, to be the newspaper's general manager, says the New York Times. John N. Popham continues as managing editor in charge of news operations. Martin S. Ochs, grandnephew of Adolph S. Ochs, continues as editor of the editorial page.

Mrs. Golden, a graduate of Brearley School in New York and of Smith College in 1943, worked briefly on the staff of The New York Times. She then went abroad as an American Red Cross Club director in Europe during World War II. From 1947 to 1956 she served as music critic of The Chattanooga Times, before Mr. Golden became publisher and president on February 14, 1957.

She is a member of the executive board of the Chattanooga Symphony Association and was its president in 1959 and 1960, and is secretary of the American Symphony Orchestra League.

She is a trustee of the University of Chattanooga and a member of the boards of the Chattanooga Area Foundation for Mental Health, the Adult Education Council, and the Art Association, and a member of the Auditorium Board and the Metropolitan Council for

Doctor To Other War Prisoners Told Of Awful Japanese Hospital

Dr. Mack Leonard Gottlieb, a retired physician who, as a naval lieutenant in World War II, was captured by the Japanese and made chief medical officer for 9,000 fellow prisoners, died of a heart attack in Manila, where he was on a vacation. He was 59 years old, says the New York Times. Dr. Gottlieb, a specialist in internal medicine, lived in Miami, Florida. He formerly practiced in New York.

In December 1941, when the Japanese occupied Guam, Dr. Gottlieb was among the naval personnel taken prisoner. About a year and a half before the end of the war, his captors made him chief medical officer at Shinagawa, a war prisoners' hospital in the Tokyo area. Four days before Japan's former surrender, he was freed by a naval evacuation mission.

Aboard a hospital ship in Tokyo Bay on September 2, 1945, the day of the formal surrender, Dr. Gottlieb and another rescued physician from New York, Capt. Harold W. Kenchner, of the Army Reserve, told of the horrors they had seen at Shinagawa.

They spoke of their captors' use of prisoners in experiments that caused unspeakable pain and often death. When the two physicians protested reductions in rations for ill prisoners, they themselves were put on half rations, they reported.

Dr. Gottlieb said that the number of deaths at Shinagawa was "enormous". Physical abuse, he said, was common, reports the New York Times, and he himself was beaten six weeks before his rescue for an offense so trivial that he [illegible]

Dr. Gottlieb was a 1926 graduate of City College. In 1930 he received the degree from New York University and the Bellevue Medical School and Hospital. He interned at Beth Israel Hospital and was also an assistant attending physician at the French Hospital and a medical clinician at the Hospital for Special Surgery.

He was in private practice before and immediately after the war and then joined the Veterans Administration to become chief med-

At Ninety Artist Continues To Paint, Works For World Peace

James N. Rosenberg, of Scarsdale, N. Y., a man of several careers, is concentrating at the age of ninety years on two — painting pictures and working for world peace. Besides bringing art into the homes of collectors, Mr. Rosenberg hopes to lead Westchester into building an arts center. And, as a lawyer, he believes that peace through law channels is logical, says the New York Times, and the promotion of the World Court into a more effective arm of the United Nations with compulsion behind rulings is essential.

The White House hung one of Mr. Rosenberg's pictures recently and he went to Albany for his first important political job -- the casting of a vote as a member of the Electoral College. He voted for President Johnson.

In recognition of Mr. Rosenberg's seventy-five years of art work and his birthday in November, Westchester Art Society presented a retrospective exhibition of his oils, lithographs, drawings, and watercolors. It included a drawing he made at the age of fourteen, and eighty pictures typical of his changing styles over the years.

The show opened in the Society's galleries at 35 West Post Road, in White Plains, N. Y., and continued for ten days. All proceeds were donated to the Society.

"I hope the money will help the Society to obtain a permanent home," Mr. Rosenberg said. "I also hope it will help to advance the plan for a Westchester cultural center for all the visual and performing arts. This rich and culturally [illegible] second fiddle to New York and get a Lincoln Center of its own."

Mr. Rosenberg is represented in the Metropolitan Museum of Art and thirty galleries throughout the U.S. An exhibition of his paintings in a Brandeis University benefit produced $250,000, but much of the money paid for pictures was a philanthropic donation, says the New York Times. "I never received more than $1,000 myself for a picture," Mr. Rosenberg said. "And I have given away thousands until I have denuded my home." He recalled ruefully that pictures by Matisse, Dufy, Modigliani and others he had bought in the Nineteen-Twenties for $5,000 were worth $2 million today.

He said that it was to help an uncle with an art gallery in Paris at that time that the pictures were sold at low prices. A Matisse that went for $1,000 was sold recently in New York for $18,000.

Mr. Rosenberg said the master he admired most was Cézanne. His pictures reflect this admiration. Some also show influences of Van Gogh, Prendergast, and the German expressionists. Most of his work is representational but some is semi-abstract.

Mr. Rosenberg does most of his work indoors. He produces simple sketches with crayons and pencils when he travels, adding many written notations about colors and forms. He later works from them.

"I see too much when I try to paint from the subject itself," he said.

In the woodlands behind his home in Scarsdale at 457 Mamaroneck Road, Mr. Rosenberg has converted an old barn into a studio, says the New York Times. Near it he has a trout pond — a winter substitute for the streams on his 1,000-acre preserve in the Adirondacks.

PSYCHIATRIST URGES WIDER USE OF DRUGS FOR MENTAL ILLNESS WINS LASKER AWARD OF $10,000

The prized Albert Lasker Medical Research Awards have gone this year to a psychiatrist who has championed the wider use of drugs against mental illness, and two California researchers who are trying to find out how viruses may cause cancer, says the New York Herald Tribune. Dr. Nathan S. Kline, psychiatrist and director of research at Rockland State Hospital, Orangeburg, N. Y., was named the winner of the $10,000 annual award for clinical research.

Dr. Renato Dulbecco, of the Salk Institute of Biological Studies, San Diego; and Dr. Harry Rubin, of the University of California, at Berkeley, are to share the $10,000 prize for basic medical research.

Dr. Kline was an early participant in the development of anti-depression drugs. He won another Lasker Award, given by the American Public Health Association in 1957, for his work on the Indian snakeroot derivative, the tranquilizer called rauwolfia.

Dr. Kline, aged forty-eight years, was born in Philadelphia, received the Bachelor's degree from Swarthmore College; and took the M. D. degree at New York University College of Medicine.

[illegible] a research grant of $1 million from the U.S. National Institutes of Health, played a little-known role in making possible the development of the Sabin oral vaccine to combat polio. He was the scientist who discovered how to grow billions of viruses — in this case weakened polio strains — from one single virus, says the New York Herald Tribune, thus insuring that no lethal forms of the virus would get into the vaccine and maim people it was supposed to protect.

Born and educated in Italy, Dr. Dulbecco came to the United States in 1947 and has been conducting basic research on viruses ever since. The Lasker jury chose him because of his demonstration that a virus need not multiply — as it does in infections — to change the nature of tissue cells from normal to cancerous.

Before Dr. Dulbecco discovered this fatal talent of somnolent viruses, cancer researchers generally discounted these pathogens as a cause of the disease. Nobody could find any viruses in the blood or tissues of patients with cancer. Now some researchers have found particles in the blood of leukemia victims which give every indication of being viruses. But the case against these most rudimentary forms of life still is not proved.

While Dr. Dulbecco was working with a mouse tumor virus — called polyoma — Dr. Rubin was studying another virus that causes a muscle cancer in chickens. Arriving at conclusions similar to Dr. Dulbecco's, says the New York Herald Tribune, Dr. Rubin also showed that the chicken virus (Rous sarcoma) needs a second or helper virus to produce cancer.

Dr. Dulbecco, aged fifty years, the M.D. degree from the University of Turin and was associated with Indiana University before joining the California Institute of Technology in 1949. He became a fellow at the Salk Institute in 1963.

Dr. Rubin, 38, trained as a veterinarian at Cornell University. He worked for the U. S Department of Agriculture and the U.S. Public Health Service on problems of animal virus disease, and is professor of virology at the University of California.

This year's Lasker award winners were chosen by a jury of fifteen leading American scientists under the chairmanship of Dr. Sydney Farber, a noted cancer researcher at the Children's Hospital Center in Boston, says the New York Herald Tribune. Dr. Kline, Dr. Dulbecco, and Dr. Rubin received their gold statuettes and checks at the award luncheon in New York.

GREENBERG-RUBIN

The marriage of Miss Ferne Rubin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Max Rubin, 7621 Eastlue Road, to Seymour Greenberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Greenberg, 1635 Van Horne Avenue, was solemnized on November 28, at half-past six o'clock, by Rabbi David Hartman, assisted by Cantor J. Dlin. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She wore a white faille gown, appliqued with embroidery. The fitted bodice had a round neckline, and short sleeves; the skirt was slim. Her tulle illusion veil was held by a seed-pearl-beaded crown; and she carried a prayer book with white orchids. Mrs. Jack Cooperberg was matron of honour. She wore a blue, beaded, peau de soie gown; made with short sleeves; and A-line skirt. She had a flowered headpiece; and carried a bouquet of white carnations, and pink roses. Heidi Chernoff, aged eight years, niece of the groom; and Lori Rubin, nine, sister of the bride, were attendants. Heidi was in a blue organza dress. Lori wore a shocking-pink, organza dress. Each had a matching hair-bow; and carried a nosegay of white and pink carnations. Charles Laxer, cousin of the bride, was best man. The ushers were: Stanley Rubin, brother of the bride; Michael Kugelmass, Jack Kugelmass, Irwin Fleming, cousins of the bride; William Schwartz, cousin of the groom; Irving Shapiro, Eli Mazer, and Aaron Bloom. The wedding flowers were white pom-poms, roses, and carnations. An orchestra played. Two hundred guests were received by Mrs. Rubin, mother of the bride, who wore a sleeveless, blue, peau de soie Empire gown; with a beaded bodice; and A-line skirt. She had a matching hat. Mrs. Greenberg, mother of the groom, wore a periwinkle-blue, peau de soie gown; with short sleeves; and a straight skirt. Her hat was of matching colour. Each had a corsage of white orchids. Mrs. I. Kugelmass, grandmother of the bride, wore a champagne-coloured lace gown. She had a matching hat; and a corsage of white orchids. Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Greenberg spent their honeymoon in Miami Beach, travelling via Eastern Air Lines. The bride travelled in a white knitted suit; and had a corsage of white orchids. They have taken up residence at 4640 Bourret Street. Richard De Long, of New York, was here for the marriage.

ZUKERMAN-FREEDMAN

The marriage of Miss Helen Freedman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Freedman, 891 Harvard Avenue, to Barry Zukerman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Zukerman, 5812 Pinedale Street, was solemnized at Beth Hamedrash Hagadol Synagogue, on Saturday, November 7, at seven o'clock, by Rabbi Lester B. Rosner, assisted by Cantor M. Kaufler. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She wore a white, satin gown; with velvet appliques; and with a scoop neckline; and short sleeves; and a full skirt, which finished with a long train. Her tulle illusion veil was attached to a flowered headdress; and she carried a prayer book, with white orchids. Mrs. Albert Alon was her sister's matron of honour. She wore a turquoise-blue, beaded, peau de soie gown. She had a beaded hat; and carried a bouquet of white and blue-tinted carnations. Mrs. Murray Bernbaum, sister of the bride; and Miss Lita Zukerman, sister of the groom, were bridesmaids, each wearing an aquamarine-blue, peau de soie gown. They had matching hats; and carried bouquets of white and turquoise-blue-tinted carnations. Eve Alon, aged six years, niece of the bride, was flower girl. She wore a turquoise-blue, silk dress; with a matching hat; and had a nosegay of white and blue-toned carnations. Irving Kaplan, brother-in-law of the groom, was best man. The ushers were: Albert Alon, Murray Bernbaum, brothers-in-law of the bride; Lazarus Caplan, Norman Friedman, Leonard Mukase, and Alvin Schacter. Benjamin Murray, aged six years; and Norman Goldstein, six, nephews of the groom; were ring-bearers. White and turquoise-blue-tinted carnations, and pom-poms decorated the Synagogue hall. An orchestra played the wedding music. Two hundred and sixty-five guests were received at a reception in the Synagogue hall. Mrs. Freedman, mother of the bride, wore a turquoise-blue, beaded, peau de soie gown, with a round neckline; short sleeves; and straight skirt. Her beaded hat was of matching colour. Mrs. Zukerman, mother of the groom, was in a blue, peau de soie, sheath gown; and had a matching hat. Each had a corsage of white orchids. Mr. and Mrs. Barry Zukerman spent their wedding trip in Miami Beach, Florida, having travelled via Eastern Air Lines. The bride wore for travelling, a blue, knitted suit; and had a corsage of white orchids. They have taken up residence at 5550 Trent Avenue. Here for the marriage were: Mrs. E. Jacobson, grandmother of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. M. Goldstein, uncle, and aunt of the groom; all of Ottawa, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. M. Gerber, of Toronto, Ont., cousins of the groom; and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cooper, uncle, and aunt of the groom, and their daughter, Miss Ruth Cooper, of Baltimore, Maryland; and their daughter, Miss Betty Cooper, of New York.

AFTER TWO WARS AND NAZI HOLOCAUST, A PAINTER BEGINS AT SEVENTY

It was not until Hanoch Appelbaum was nearly seventy that he was able to satisfy a lifelong desire to paint. And now, earlier this year, some 100 paintings in oils and water colors, the fruits of six years' work, went on display in Pardess Hannah, a pleasant citrus town south of Haifa, Israel.

Hanoch had survived two world wars and the Nazi holocaust, to find himself in the middle 1950's at one of the old age homes of Malben, the welfare program on behalf of aged, ill, and handicapped newcomers to Israel, maintained by the Joint Distribution Committee, with funds from the United Jewish Appeal.

In his native Radzin, Poland (then part of Russia), he traveled in artistic circles and came to know such writers as I. L. Peretz, Sholom Aleichem, and Tschernichovsky. During World War I, when the Germans invaded Poland, he, together with many other Jews, made his way into Russia. When he was arrested by the Bolsheviks as a Polish spy after the Russian Revolution, it was Maxim Gorki's wife who interceded on his behalf and won his release.

With a wife and two children to support, however, Hanoch turned to the more regular income of the house-painter. But he never gave up his yearning to do creative work. When the Nazis invaded Poland he and his family were sent to the concentration camp. His wife and both children were murdered but Hanoch managed to survive.

After the war, lonely and uprooted, he started on a career as a violinist. Although he gained wide recognition he soon lost interest in his musical career. There was no inspiration, there was no satisfaction. Post-war Poland was a land of bitter memories; he had had his fill of it. He made his way to Israel some ten years ago.

There, at last, he could paint as much as he liked. He could also conduct the village choir, and organize a dramatic circle and folk dance group.

"Painting is my major interest," says Hanoch. "In the ten years I have been living here I have perfected my own techniques and successfully experimented with all kinds of painting materials." The crowning achievement of Hanoch came in his 76th year, when the city fathers of Pardess Hannah solemnly opened his one-man art show. Hanoch proudly showed the visitors around. And proudly pasted the reviews of the critics in his scrapbook.

Shabbos At The White House

By Henry I. Sobel, aged twenty years, senior student at Yeshiva University in New York

Wednesday, September 30, 1964, 2:30 p.m. ". . . Please come to the Dean's office right away . . ." I heard the phone receiver click off. My heart sank with anxiety and concern, only to laugh with relief and indescribable elation in the Dean's office as I was advised of my selection to represent the undergraduates of Yeshiva University at the White House by invitation of the President of the United States. What an overwhelming experience just imagining the aura of excitement and splendor that would come within the next hours — but always aware of the responsibility to my university, religion and fellow students.

The highlight of the Presidential invitation centered about the reception for the student leaders representing a handful of universities chosen from throughout the United States.

The heavy downpour of rain remained unnoticed as I boarded the plane for Washington, D. C. on Friday afternoon, October 2. From the Washington National Airport to the Manger Hay-Adams Hotel, the Washington air aroused an exuberant sensation.

Saturday morning's sunrise brought with it the rays of much excitement and lightheartedness. As I walked to the synagogue for the Sabbath services, I could not help but glance at the majestic White House through the corner of my eye. I dared not stare at the white pillared estate directly for fear of it revealing a lovely surprise, meant to come only later on.

At Shul, I had the unexpected pleasure of meeting Herman Wouk at the services. He graciously invited me to his home for the Shabbos meal. The worldliness and warmth of my host, hostess, and lovely children at lunch drew me away from the anticipating anxious feeling. Mr. Wouk, distinguished author and scholar, and his charming wife toured me afoot for several hours, explaining the background for his new novel.

It was so lofty a day! (I explained my mission to the Wouks as the representative of our nation's first university under Jewish auspices.) I felt so proud when the famed author told me: "A worthy representative of 'our' university," referring to the fact that he is a former member of the faculty and an honorary degree recipient.

Close to 5 p.m. I approached the Southwest gates of the White House. I lost the gripping feeling of over-powering anxiety when I saw the many fellow students approaching and joining me on the threshold of the most momentous occasion of our lives. As I presented my credentials, an honor guard came to escort me on the White House lawn. I felt much relaxed and relieved amidst my quickly made friends.

But I could not help mentally pinching myself in a reassuring manner that this was reality as I ascended the plush-carpeted stairs overshadowed by a large portrait of George Washington, as the multitude of attache-carrying governmental representatives brushed by. I was living History. The sensation was marvelous. I was led into the East Room, as the Naval Academy Orchestra of forty in uniform sounded through the hallowed halls.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk was the first to address the student leaders, followed by Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara who stressed the role of his department in the prevention of a thermo-nuclear attack on the United States. Secretary of Labor Willard Wirtz dynamically and dramatically emphasized the grave dangers inherent in unemployment. He quoted Descartes: " . . . I think, therefore I am." He emphasized faith in the future. "I believe . . . therefore I shall be" is to guide us through our future, said the Secretary.

. . . And, then, nothing could surpass the experience of beholding the President in person, Lady Bird and Linda, the charming twenty-year-old daughter of the President. The standing ovation he received still rings in my ears and lingers in my heart. I could not help but feel so indebted to my school for letting me live these spirited moments, and, ever remembering this, I carried proudly the emblem of my religion and school — a yarmulka (skull cap).

"Mr. Henry Sobel, Yeshiva University, New York", exclaimed the Lieutenant as I was introduced to the President. I took a deep breath and quickly regained equilibrium as I felt the virile handshake of the President, noticing his pleasant smile, his intelligent, bright eyes and grandeur stature. "Yeshiva University, oh yes, I received an honorary degree from Yeshiva," replied the President.

Though the line of greeters before me had moved briskly and without much conversation, I stood for some time conversing with the President about Yeshiva University, conveying to him the greetings and good wishes of my school President, Dr. Samuel Belkin. I felt at ease speaking to the President and felt a mutual familiarity when President Johnson asked me to greet President Belkin, sending him his personal regards.

Mrs. Johnson looked regal and I was proud beyond expression when she said: "Henry, a pleasure to have you with us." Linda Johnson looked radiant and as official hostess of the evening, she was most gracious and friendly. My yarmulka (skull cap) made many other students feel warmly towards me and I was most appreciative of Mr. McNamara's pleasant chat with me.

Towards the latter part of the evening, the most unforgettable event happened. It was the most moon-reaching dream I was to behold: the President of the United States of America and I, ALONE, in lengthy conversation. The only student representative to be granted a private discussion with the President! It was nothing short of being knighted!

I discussed with the President the unique feature of the Yeshiva University education. "A double-curriculum allows the Yeshiva University student to further his Jewish studies and at the same time maintain a high academic secular education at a college of high standing," were my words. The President glanced occasionally at my yarmulka (skull cap), which contributed greatly to my pride and joy, pride in representing my people to the American government.

I could not help but feel flushed and floating when the President firmly shook my hand as photographs were taken. "Continued success and best wishes," the President bade me while patting me on the back. It was no longer difficult for me to realize that this was all true and real. I kept repeating to myself over and over again . . . "imagine, I, Henry Sobel and the President of the United States", what a thrilling experience!

The theme of the President's message rested warmly with all the students. He presented his new program, The White House Fellows, which affords the opportunity to fifteen "fellows" of ages 23 to 35 to become part of the White House staff and thereby prepare them for their future roles as leaders of our nation. The President expressed the hope of seeing many in his audience as "fellows" in the near future.

I left my hotel room on Sunday morning clutching a copy of Herman Wouk's "Aurora Dawn" with the inscription: "A worthy representative of 'our' University". As my return plane rose high into the clouds, I bade Washington a fond farewell, catching once more a glimpse of the White House, the home of my honored hosts, and reliving the moments I had spent there, home again; more man-better citizen-and proud American-grateful student, mindful of God and Judaism.

MONTREAL MARRIAGES

DAVIS-CHERRY

The marriage of Miss Roslyn Cherry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Cherry, 8007 Outremont Avenue, to Bernard Davis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Davis, 410 Dufferin Road, was solemnized at Beth Ora Synagogue, on Sunday, December 27, at half-past six o'clock, by Rabbi Morris Halpern, assisted by Cantor Samuel Taube, and Reverend A. Kenner. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a fitted gown of white, peau de soie and lace, enhanced with beaded appliques; and designed with a boat-shaped neckline; long sleeves; and A-line skirt shaping into a long train. Her tulle illusion veil was arranged with a flowered headdress; and she carried a prayer book with her bouquet of white orchids, and stephanotis. Miss Sonia Gladin was maid of honour. She wore a sleeveless, shocking pink, peau de soie gown, which had a beaded bodice; and bell-shaped skirt; also a hat of that shade; and carried red roses. Miss Freema Davis, sister of the groom; and Miss Karen Fellows were bridesmaids. Miss Davis wore a sleeveless, pale pink gown, appliqued with crystal beads, and fashioned with an A-line skirt; also a matching hat. Miss Fellows was in a pale pink, peau de soie gown with a beaded bodice; and full skirt; and had a pink hat. Each carried a cascade bouquet of red roses. Stanley Selinger was best man. The ushers were: Edward Cherry, brother of the bride; Ronald Eliosoff, Michael Cohen, Peter Schwartz, cousins of the groom; Harvey Hirsch, and Michael Lemoine. Pink, and red roses; carnations, and gladioli decorated the Synagogue hall. An orchestra played the wedding music. Three hundred guests were received at a dinner. Mrs. Cherry, mother of the bride, wore a sleeveless, pink, and gold-coloured brocade gown, cut with a round neckline; and sheath skirt with a back panel; and a matching tiara. Mrs. Davis, mother of the groom, wore a sleeveless, pink, lace sheath gown, trimmed with velvet; with a velvet, pill-box hat. Each had a corsage of white orchids. Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Davis spent their wedding trip in Bermuda, W. I., having flown there via Air Canada. The bride travelled in a beige, wool ensemble; and had a corsage of white orchids. They have taken up residence at 350 Graham Boulevard. Here for the marriage were: Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Shapiro, of Long Island, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. J. Levine, and daughter, Miss Rayleigh Levine, of Amsterdam, N. Y.; uncles, and aunts of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Levine, of Schenectady, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Specter, of Long Island; Mr. and Mrs. Irving E. Bercle, of Toronto, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. Max Levenson, of New Haven, Conn.; all cousins of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Murray Davis, of Clarkson, Ont., uncle, and aunt of the groom; Dr. and Mrs. I. Selbert, of Amsterdam, New York; and Mr. and Mrs. H. Mayberger, of Ottawa, Ont.

The marriage of Miss Anita Marilyn Einbinder, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Einbinder, 6720 Clanranald Avenue, to Harvey Clyde Brown, son of Mrs. Freda Brown, 2018 Querbes Avenue, and the late Jack Brown, was solemnized at Zichron Kedoshim Synagogue, on Sunday, October 11, at six o'clock, by Rabbi Jacob J. Ziotnick, assisted by Cantor Leib Rankin. The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her fitted, white, peau de soie gown was made with a fitted bodice; square neckline; elbow-length sleeves made of Guipure lace; and bell-shaped skirt which terminated in a long train. Her short veil of tulle illusion was topped with a flowered headdress; and she carried a prayer book with white orchids, and stephanotis. The bride had her twin sister, Miss Sandra Einbinder, as maid of honour, wearing a sleeveless, blue, peau de soie gown, appliqued with beads, and made with a round neckline; and bell-shaped skirt. She had a pill-box hat; and carried a bouquet of blue carnations. Miss Rona Einbinder was her sister's bridesmaid. She wore an Empire gown of blue, peau de soie, with short sleeves; and a matching headband; and carried a bouquet of blue, and white carnations. Michael Brown, brother of the groom, was best man. The ushers were: Cy Brown, brother of the groom; Marvin Small, cousin of the groom; Harold Rich, cousin of the bride; Jerry Scholl, Bernard Lacht, and David Shtern. Aubie Hetsenovitch: aged five years, cousin of the bride, was ring-bearer. White, and blue carnations, and roses formed the setting for the ceremony. Two hundred guests were received in the Synagogue hall. Mrs. Einbinder, mother of the bride, wore a sleeveless, blue crepe, sheath gown, made with a beaded, scalloped neckline; also a pill-box hat. Mrs. Brown, mother of the groom, was in a white, and blue, sleeveless, chiffon gown which had a round neckline; and full skirt; with a matching tiara. Their flowers were corsages of white, and blue carnations. Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Clyde Brown spent their wedding trip in the Pocono Mountains of Pennsylvania, the bride going away in a blue, silk suit; with a corsage of white orchids. They have taken up residence in Brandon, Manitoba.

Have You A Relative Who Has Emigrated From Canada To Israel?

The following letter is from Dr. Ascher Segall, of the Harvard University School of Public Health, department of epidemiology, the son of Jerry Segall of Montreal, and the late Mrs. Pauline Raginsky Segall:

The Harvard School of Public Health is currently investigating the feasibility of conducting an epidemiologic health survey of Americans and Canadians who have migrated to Israel and their brothers and sisters in the U.S.A. The purpose of the study is to determine whether differences in mode of life, nutrition, and occupation between siblings are associated with differences in the risk of developing heart disease. This type of study is designed to provide information which will eventually lead to effective measures for preventing heart disease.

Before such a study can be started, it is necessary to determine the number of persons eligible for participation. Since the total number of Israelis of American and Canadian origin is relatively small, it is essential that we locate as high a proportion of them as possible.

One method of identifying Canadians in Israel is through their relatives residing in Canada. For this purpose, may we request that the enclosed item be published in your periodical in the near future? This will enable your readers who have relatives in Israel to co-operate in the study. Your assistance in this matter will be very much appreciated.

Mr. and Mrs. N. Steinberg, of Toms River, N. J., uncle, and aunt of the bride, were here for the marriage.

HELLER-CRANSTON

The marriage of Miss Bonnie Cranston, daughter of Mrs. Bernice Goldstein, 4909 Clanranald Avenue, and the late Roy Cranston, to Steven Heller, of Toronto, Ont., son of Mrs. Molly Heller, 2675 Bedford Road, and the late Max Heller, took place at Shaare Zion Synagogue, on Sunday, November 1, at half-past six o'clock. Rabbi Maurice S. Cohen officiated, assisted by Cantor Solomon Glaser. The bride was given in marriage by Sydney Abramowitz, her uncle; and by her mother. The white velvet bodice of her gown was fashioned with a high neckline; and three-quarter-length sleeves; and the white, satin, A-line skirt terminated with a long train. Her tulle illusion veil was combined with a flowered head-piece; and she carried a prayer book, with white orchids. Miss Marilyn Macara, of Yellowknife, North West Territories, was maid of honour. She wore a pale, blue, peau de soie sheath gown. Her hat matched it; and she carried a cascade bouquet of white and blue-tinted carnations and roses. Misses Ruth Isakson, and Maxine Elman, were bridesmaids, each wearing a pale blue satin gown, with a beaded bodice. They had matching headbands; and carried bouquets of white and blue-tinted carnations. Morris Cappel was his cousin's best man. The ushers were: Harold Berman, uncle of the bride; Edward Kerzner, and Jack Skydel, cousins of the bride; Brian Cappel, cousin of the groom; Herah Frankel, Percy Rashcovsky, Allan Silverman, Jack Bramley, Ronald Tancer, and Joseph Levitt. Standards of blue-toned and white carnations, roses, and pom-poms, were arranged to decorate the Synagogue. The wedding music was played by an orchestra. Two hundred guests were received in the Synagogue hall. Mrs. Goldstein, mother of the bride, wore a blue brocade gown; appliqued with matching beads; and designed with a jewel neckline; and short sleeves. The sheath skirt was slit at the sides; and her hat matched. Mrs. Heller, mother of the groom, wore a sleeveless, blue brocade sheath gown; made with a bow at the back. Her hat was blue. Each had a corsage of white orchids. Mr. and Mrs. Steven Heller spent their wedding trip on a Caribbean cruise; and in Bridgeport, Conn., the bride travelling in a blue silk ensemble; and had a corsage of white orchids. They have taken up residence at 4323 Bathurst Street, Toronto. Here for the marriage were: Mr. and Mrs. Donald Vineberg, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cappel and Brian Cappel, Linda, and Bruce; cousins of the groom; Fred Becker, Norman Segal, and Mr. and Mrs. Murray Greenberg; all of Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Kerzner, of Ottawa, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. Jack Skydel, of Bridgeport; all cousins of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Jacobson, of Bridgeport; and Mrs. Bella Finkelstein, of Portland, Maine; and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Berman, uncle, and aunt of the bride, of Ottawa.

Jubilee Project Of The Jewish People's School Is Under Way In Montreal

By Joseph Berman, Chairman of the Golden Jubilee Project Campaign, writing in The Montreal Gazette

Somewhere in the distant past of Montreal's unique and fascinating history of educational development, there is a place reserved for the Jewish People's Schools which was born in a time of turmoil, survived the convulsions of social change, and lives today to mark a half-century of existence of a great future which awaits this nation.

The Jewish People's Schools, now engaged in celebrating its Golden Jubilee, has earned a place in the city's history, not only because it has enriched the life of those of the Jewish faith, but also because it has contributed to the complex mosaic and cultural milieu of Canada, over a period of 50 years.

The institution, in its broadest aspects, has never been content to inculcate its students with the bare minimum deemed necessary for the Jewish cultural survival; this is reflected particularly in the announcement a few days ago by Charles Balinsky, vice-chairman of the Jubilee Project, giving details of plans for the expansion of the facilities.

The expansion plans calling for the construction of an additional floor atop the present building at Van Horne and Westbury avenues, are expected to be implemented and the project completed next year. The $250,000 campaign to achieve this goal is already under way.

Of greater importance, perhaps, than the actual physical plan which is to undergo an extensive improvement, are the additions to the overall program of the schools to be made possible by the enlarged structure.

Significantly, these extensions of the overall curriculum, in a sense, are perhaps somewhat ahead of their time, in that they cover some of the recommendations of the Parent Commission.

This is hardly surprising to educators responsible for the Protestant and Catholic school systems, with whom the closest liaison is maintained, since the Jewish People's Schools has long been known as a pioneer in trying to achieve the most with the best, for the approximate 1,000 pupils who pass through its doors.

Some of the new programming features contemplated for the school, are a nursery for pre-kindergarten schooling, additional classrooms, so that it no longer be necessary for some of the students to attend school in "borrowed" quarters such as the Young Men's-Young Women's Hebrew Association, a library, to replace the one which now is also used as a classroom because of limited space, new staff facilities, and special facilities for science projects.

All this, of course, takes care of basic elementary education in the context and curriculum of the public school system.

However, what gives the Jewish People's Schools a special uniqueness, and makes it worthy of continuing support by the Jewish and non-Jewish community is its consistent determination over a period of a half-century to maintain and strengthen the link with Jewish culture, tradition and religiosity which is so necessary in emphasising the pluralistic values of the Canadian way of life.

In this connection, the use of the plural in the name Jewish People's "Schools" is interesting, and reflects almost an internal pluralism with the school building.

For one thing, and technically, the institution is actually made up of three schools: the day school where the curriculum covers the full program as outlined by the Provincial Department of Education, plus a full range of Hebrew and Yiddish subjects; the afternoon school for students attending the Protestant public schools, and covering Hebrew and Yiddish subjects including literature, the Bible, history, folklore, and the like, and the evening high school which is an extension of the elementary Hebrew and Yiddish curriculum.

It is also interesting that the school has long recognized the fact that in a bilingual community such as Montreal, French must be taught with equal skill and devotion as English, Hebrew and Yiddish.

It is for this reason then, and typical of the Jewish People's Schools, that the French supervisor uses French as his mother tongue, and the results of this standard of teaching are readily evident in the facility of the children in speaking the province's first language.

The Jewish People's Schools has the word "people" appropriately included in its name, since it is essentially a folks institution primarily devoted to education in the Judeo-Canadian context, despite the financial burdens involved.

It comes as no surprise, therefore that 35 per cent of our children attend our school on a reduced fee basis, further, it comes as no surprise, that the community is being asked to help carry the financial burden.

Mr. Balinsky, in formally proclaiming the Jubilee Project, at the 50th anniversary dinner, quoted from the eminent and influential 18th Century British Philosopher, David Hume: "The sweetest and most inoffensive path of life leads through the avenues of science and learning; and whoever can either remove any obstruction in this way, or open up any new prospect, ought to be esteemed a benefactor to mankind."

Let us therefore resolve each one of us to do our share and make this jubilee year memorable. Not only to mark 50 years of existence, but as that year when the Folks Shule rededicated itself for the next 50 years of fruitful work by providing more opportunities for more children, so that the survival of Jewish culture and tradition would be safeguarded.

THE CASE OF THE NAZI DOCTOR WITH A PRICE ON HIS HEAD

By Jack Baker, Director of Foreign Research of the A.D.L. Bulletin of the Anti-Defamation League of Bnai Brith

"LONDON — The London Daily Express reported today from Asuncion, Paraguay, that the hunt was on again there for Dr. Josef Mengele, the Auschwitz selection doctor. The report said that Mengele, who fled to Paraguay from Argentina in 1961, was under the protection of Alfredo Stroessner, the Paraguayan President.

"Despite continued denials, Israel and the West German government have proof that Mengele currently is in hiding not far from Asuncion, the Express said."

The above story, sent out by the Jewish Telegraphic Agency, an international news wire service, was one of many about missing Nazi war criminals reported since 1946 when the West German government began its investigations. By the end of December, 1962, West Germany had looked into 80,000 cases and made 12,846 arraignments. Convictions numbered 5,426 — but Josef Mengele, former SS captain, physician at Auschwitz from 1943 to 1945, was still missing.

Last July the West German government offered the biggest reward in the history of German justice — 60,000 marks ($15,000) — for the apprehension of Josef Mengele. The charges against him: selecting tens of thousands of prisoners for the gas chambers of Auschwitz; killing prisoners by the injection of phenol, air or benzine; murdering a 14-year-old girl by stabbing her to death with a bayonet; tramping an infant to death; killing Jewish children by medical experiments.

Until 1951 Josef Mengele, M.D. and Ph.D., had lived under his real name in various places in Bavaria. He fled when the public became aware of his past. It took Bonn government investigators two years to substantiate all the charges against him so that an official search could be initiated.

Six years later Mengele was discovered in Buenos Aires, representing the farm machine factory of Karl Mengele & Sons which is managed by his brother, Alois, in Guenzburg, Bavaria. Although the German government asked for immediate extradition, it was nearly a year before an Argentine court issued a warrant of arrest. By then, Mengele had left Buenos Aires.

Despite periodic reports of his appearance in Argentina, Brazil, and Peru, Mengele had found a new refuge — Paraguay. The country has been a paradise for former Nazis. With Hitler's ascendency to power, its colony of some 30,000 Germans received intensive indoctrination in the pro-Nazi NSDAP — Landesgruppe Paraguay. They were promised resettlement on large estates in the "conquered Polish East."

During World War II Paraguay circumvented United States suggestions to dissolve the Nazi colony. Instead, the German villages were designated "internment camps," thereby permitting the settlers to carry on their activities unhampered.

Though their dream of new Lebensraum in Europe's East ended with Hitler's downfall, the majority of Paraguay's Germans remained Nazis at heart. Nazi war crimes, in their opinion, were "propaganda." Their favorite reading matter today is the Deutsche National — Zeitung and Soldaten — Zeitung, and Nation Europa, West German publications dedicated to "correcting" history. According to the publications, Germany didn't start the war; six million Jews weren't slaughtered. Dictator Alfredo Stroessner, grandson of a Bavarian cavalry captain, shares the pro-Nazi bias of the German colony and is surrounded by a band of German elite-guards.

Under such favorable conditions Paraguay has been an asylum for fugitive SS officers and Nazi party functionaries, integrated by Stroessner into his civil service and state police. A first load arrived in Paraguay in 1955. A second group sought safety there in the wake of Eichmann's apprehension in Buenos Aires.

Dr. Josef Mengele, too, sought security in Paraguay. As early as November, 1959, he succeeded in obtaining naturalization papers under the name of José Mengele. Two men falsely testified that Mengele had been a resident of Paraguay for five years. The accommodating witnesses were Alexander von Eckstein, a former major in the Paraguayan army and a friend of Nazi air ace Colonel Rudel, and Werner Jung, who was chief of the Nazi unit in Paraguay during World War II. After the war, Jung's iron and metal firm had represented the company owned by Mengele's brother in Bavaria.

ADOPTIONS

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Appelby (nee Joyce Cowan), 339 Pleasant Avenue, announce the adoption of their daughter, Andrea; sister of Mindy, aged two and one-half years; granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. Appelby, 20 Wembley Road; and of Dr. and Mrs. R. Cowan, 39 Alexis Boulevard.

BAR-MITZVAHS

Eric James, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Swetsky, 166 Kings College Road, Fredericton, N. B., was called to the Reading of the Law, in honour of his bar-mitzvah, at Sgoolai Israel Synagogue. He is the brother of Barbara, aged nine years; grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Max Lubek, 70 Fairholme Avenue, Toronto; and of the late Mr. and Mrs. B. Swetsky, of Saint John, N. B.

Howard Sydney, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sokolowski, 17 Castlewood Avenue, will be called to the Reading of the Law, on January 26, at Adath Israel Synagogue. He is the brother of Marsha. Kiddush will follow the services, and a dinner-reception will take place that same evening, at the Synagogue.

MARRIAGES

EIMER-NAIMAN

The marriage of Miss Eleanor Naiman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mack Naiman, 59 Langholme Drive, to Stephen Eimer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Emanuel Eimer, of Flushing, N. Y., was solemnized on December 19, at half-past six o'clock, at Adath Israel Synagogue. Rabbi Erwin Schild officiated, assisted by Cantor Murray Nixon. The bride was given in marriage, by her parents. Her fitted, sleeveless gown, of white satin peau de soie, was fashioned with a scooped neckline; and long sleeves; and an A-line skirt. An appliqued jacket shaped to a chapel train. Her tulle illusion veil was attached to a crown of seed-pearl-beads centred with a drop. She carried a bouquet of pink roses. Mrs. Murray Phillips, sister of the bride, was matron of honour. Misses Jacqueline Granville, and Judith and Natalie Eimer, sisters of the groom, were bridesmaids. The junior bridesmaid was Elaine Phillips, of Burlington, Ont., niece of the bride. Alan Eimer was best man for his brother. The ushers were: Murray Phillips, brother-in-law of the bride; Alan Flieker and Earl Schuman. The Synagogue was decorated with standards of pink gladioli, and blue and purple chrysanthemums. A dinner reception was held in the Synagogue hall, with two hundred and twenty-five guests present. Mrs. Naiman received in a turquoise-blue, brocaded gown; with a fitted bodice; and short sleeves; and a short train. She had a matching headpiece; and a wristlet of pink and blue-tinted roses. Mrs. Eimer chose a pink, peau de soie gown, with its own jacket; and a slim skirt. She had a matching headpiece, with a short veil; and a wristlet of blue-tinted and pink roses. Mrs. Ethel Eimer, of New York, grandmother of the groom, was escorted to the altar by her son, Charles Eimer. She wore a pink lace dress; with a jewelled crown. Mrs. Solomon Naiman, grandmother of the bride, wore a royal-blue dress, trimmed with matching beading. Each had a corsage of pink and blue-tinted roses. Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Eimer spent their honeymoon at the Nevele Hotel, in Ellenville, N. Y. The bride travelled in a black and white tweed suit; with a green hat; and a corsage of pink and blue roses. They are residing in New York. Here for the marriage were: Mr. and Mrs. Charles Eimer, of New York; Mrs. Goldie Horn, of Brooklyn, N. Y., uncle and aunts of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. Morris Sobel, of Calgary, Alta.; Mr. and Mrs. Julius Spier, of Brooklyn, N. Y., uncles and aunts of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Errol Schuman, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Sniderman, of Oshawa, Ont.; Arthur Seltzman, of New York; Mrs. Harry Rosenbaum, of Detroit, Mich.; cousins of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Irving Rosen, of New York; Mrs. Joseph Sartor, of Montreal, Que.; Mr. and Mrs. A. THE CASE OF THE NAZI DOCTOR

Dr. Mengele first lived at the Pension Astra in Asuncion, Paraguay's capital. Supplied regularly with money from a Buenos Aires metal goods factory, 50% of whose shares he owns, Mengele enjoyed life in the company of former Nazi friends. He felt so safe that he did not even bother to change or conceal physical characteristics which make him easily recognizable: a three-cornered gap between his front teeth, and a slightly squinting left eye.

About two years ago, his whereabouts were traced by investigators of Frankfurt prosecutor Dr. Fritz Bauer. The German Embassy in Asuncion demanded that Paraguayan authorities establish Mengele's identity. After months of delaying tactics, Stroessner's officials denied that "José Mengele" was the criminal wanted by the German government.

In spite of the protection, Mengele no longer felt safe in the capital. He found a hiding place on the farm of Alban Krug in Hohenau, a German settlement near the town of Encarnacion. Living under the name of "Fritz Fischer" he became a well known figure in Bella Vista and Ogbligado, nearby German settlements.

Under his real name, however, Mengele frequently patronized a luxury hotel near Hohenau, owned by a former Flemish SS man and favored by Paraguayan socialites and President Stroessner. There, according to a recent report in the German news magazine Der Spiegel, "Israeli agents" nearly trapped Mengele. They came twenty minutes too late. Mengele, allegedly warned by Krug, had fled in his pajamas.

Mengele returned to Asuncion to consult with his friends. His case had become embarrassing to the Paraguayan government. In July, Bonn's Ambassador Eckart Briest had renewed demands for Mengele's extradition. Stroessner refused. Last August, when Briest intensified his efforts, he received telephone threats from the doctor's henchmen.

The German Embassy in Asuncion was defaced by crude inscriptions in Spanish and German: "Jüdische Botschaft — Hände weg von Mengele — wir befehlen!!" (Jewish Embassy — Hands off Mengele — We command!!)

Mengele's Nazi friends were becoming worried. They had learned that Dr. Raul Sapena Pastor, Paraguay's Foreign Minister, had advised President Stroessner to get rid of Mengele, thus bolstering his relations with the Federal Republic. Stroessner, politically ambitious, and mindful of the fact that the Bonn government had extended a three million dollar credit to Paraguay in 1963, sought an invitation for an official state visit to West Germany. Protecting Mengele made such an invitation highly improbable.

Nobody knows whether Stroessner will sacrifice the killer doctor for political objectives, but Mengele, apparently, is taking no chances. He has retired to land purchased before his stay in Paraguay became an affair of state. It lies about three miles from the little frontier garrison Carlos Antonio Lopez, near the upper Parana River. There the jungle offers an ideal hideout.

The river separates Paraguay from Argentina and Brazil. On the Argentine shore lies Eldorado, a habitat of German colonists. It has a luxury hotel with a swimming pool and the only telegraph station within several hundred miles. There is also a German bank and the Argentine firm of Ricardo Caffetti, a distributor of farm machinery manufactured by Karl Mengele & Sons.

But Mengele, often observed in the past at the frontier crossing Foz do Iguacu in Brazil, and Encarnacion-Posadas in Argentina hasn't been seen since early September.

Travel has become dangerous. On the Brazilian side of the river, guards are watching for him. In Argentina, natives scan the river for his speed boat, hoping to collect the West German reward money. And in Paraguay, there is the unpredictable Stroessner.

Like his Auschwitz "patients," it seems that Dr. Mengele's days are numbered.

CLASS IN COOKERY

CRANBERRY ORANGE MUFFINS

two cups all-purpose flour
one cup sugar
two teaspoons baking powder
one-half teaspoon baking soda one cup raw cranberries
one-quarter cup warm water
one-half cup walnuts three tablespoons grated orange peel
one egg
one-half cup orange juice two tablespoons vegetable oil
one teaspoon salt

In a large bowl, sift flour, sugar, baking powder, baking soda, and salt. Stir in washed cranberries cut in half, chopped walnuts, and orange peel. Combine slightly beaten egg, orange juice, water, and oil. Add to flour mixture. Stir just enough to moisten ingredients. Spoon into well-greased muffin pan. Bake at four hundred and twenty-five degrees for twenty to twenty-five minutes, or until done. Cool in pan for five minutes. Remove from pan, and finish cooling on rack. Yields one dozen medium-sized muffins.

Mrs. Nat Horovitch,
5198 Mariette Avenue, Montreal.

FRENCH APPLE COBBLER

five cups peeled, sliced, tart apples three-quarters cup sugar
one tablespoon soft butter or margarine
one-quarter teaspoon salt
two tablespoons all-purpose flour one-half teaspoon cinnamon
one teaspoon vanilla
one-quarter cup water

In a medium-sized bowl, combine above ingredients. Turn into a greased, nine-by-nine-inch, by one and three-quarter-inch baking pan.

Batter

one cup all-purpose flour
one-half cup sugar
one-half teaspoon baking powder
one-quarter teaspoon salt
two tablespoons soft butter or margarine
one egg

In a medium-sized bowl combine sifted, dry ingredients. Add butter or margarine, and slightly beaten egg. Beat with wooden spoon until smooth. Drop batter over apples, dividing into nine portions, spacing evenly. Batter will spread during baking. Bake in a preheated oven for thirty-five to forty minutes at 350 degrees, or until apples are fork-tender, and crust is golden brown. Serve warm with whipped cream.

Here are three important reasons why it will pay you to renovate and redecorate your home now!

1 SKILLED MEN ARE AVAILABLE—NOW! Although more and more building is being done each winter, exterior construction does slow down during the cold weather. As a result, home improvement contractors and skilled craftsmen seek out the smaller interior jobs that they are unable to handle during the summer. You benefit—with skilled workmanship by experienced tradesmen when it's most convenient to you!

2 DISCOUNTS AND LOANS ARE AVAILABLE—NOW! To create incentives that will balance their sales and keep their staff employed throughout the year, building supply dealers run winter sales. These special discounts help you renovate and redecorate at the lowest possible cost. You'll find your bank a good place to visit, too—for low-interest Home Improvement Loans under the National Housing Act: up to $4,000.00, with up to ten years to repay!

3 MATERIALS ARE AVAILABLE—NOW! When building slows down, materials become more readily available. Result: irritating delays in completing your job because of late delivery of supplies are eliminated!

There's no doubt about it. Winter is the very best time to spruce up your home (and your place of business)—quickly, efficiently, inexpensively!

For advice and assistance call your National Employment Office

Everyone benefits when winter work is increased. DO IT NOW!

PROSECUTION OF NAZI MASS MURDER MUST NOT, AND WILL NOT, END NEXT MAY

Recently an article on this subject, written by German Ambassador Heinrich Knappstein, appeared in the German-language newspaper, Aufbau, in New York. A translation of the article, from the German Embassy in Washington, D.C., to the Canadian Jewish Review, follows:

In the past few weeks and months all of us, and particularly we in Germany's Embassy in Washington, have been greatly concerned with a problem that has evoked violent discussions, grave accusations and deplorable misunderstandings, the problem of the application of the statute of limitations to Nazi crimes in Germany.

I am therefore particularly grateful to the editors of the Aufbau for giving me space in the pages of their courageous and truth-seeking paper to say something on the subject. In doing so I do not set out to justify the position of the German Government, but to present the facts without whose knowledge this complicated problem cannot possibly be judged.

The starting point of the debate was a provision in the German criminal code whereby a murder falls under the statute of limitations twenty years after it has been committed, that is, after such a period has elapsed no trial proceedings can any longer be opened. That would imply that any murder committed before the end of the Hitler regime, that is, before May 8, 1945, would be subject to this statute after May 8, 1965. The practical implication of this legal situation, unfortunately, has been so thoroughly misunderstood in the United States, and elsewhere, that some clarification is called for.

On one point there is undisputed agreement between the Federal Government, the German Parliament, all leading personalities in Germany and the many organizations and individuals here in the U.S. who have sent me worried and even dramatic petitions: that the horrible mass murders of the days of the Hitler regime must not fall under this statute; that the Nazi criminals who have committed these deeds must have their proper punishment meted out to them, for the sake of justice.

This goes for the petty sadists who strutted through concentration camps with bludgeon or pistol, and beat their victims to death or "finished them off" with a shot in the neck, as much as for those big bureaucrats of murder who organized the whole pandemonium.

The German people know very well, and their leaders know it even better, that guilt can only be atoned for and that justice with regard to such criminals must take its course, regardless of legal technicalities. After all, thousands of Germans, too, and certainly not the worst, became the tyrant's victims in their resistance against him.

During the past weeks, we have received a great number of petitions, letters, and telegrams from well-meaning and truly concerned persons and groups, particularly from Jewish circles and organizations in the United States. It pained us to see that most of them, but also many newspaper articles on this subject, were based on assumptions about the effects of this statute which are not in keeping with the facts, but profoundly mistaken.

There seems to be a widespread impression that in Germany after May 8, 1965, all Nazi criminals not legally adjudicated by that time would go scot-free; that hundreds or even thousands (one publication spoke of ten thousand) of Nazi criminals who had tortured and murdered human beings could promenade freely in Germany's streets and jeer at all legal authorities: "You can't do a thing against us, our deeds are subject to the statute of limitations." All one can say with regard to this notion is that it is false.

Regrettably, we have also often been confronted with another, no less erroneous notion, namely: that the German courts did practically nothing to clean up the German house "except for a few show trials designed to throw dust in the eyes of the world," as someone said to me in a recent conversation. This notion, too, is false, as I shall demonstrate.

To begin with the latter problem; what has actually become of the criminals of those evil years; what have the courts, particularly the German courts, done so far to bring them to justice?

Let me first delineate the five most important groups:

1. It is known that a large number of Nazi criminals escaped the consequences of their crimes by biting the cyanide capsule or shooting themselves with their own service pistols. This not only includes Hitler, Himmler, Goering, Goebbels, Ley and others, but also a long list of Gauleiters, leaders of "Special Groups" (Einsatz- und Sonderkommandos) and others. So to speak, they have, by their suicide, eradicated themselves from the list of Nazi criminals and escaped worldly justice. Their number is hard to ascertain but is very high according to present investigations.
2. A great number of the perpetrators were sentenced or otherwise brought to justice in East European countries, for example, in Poland where many concentration camps were located, or in Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, and the Soviet Union. We may be sure that none of the Nazi criminals caught there escaped justice, all the more as the Western Allies extradited suspects they had caught to those countries where these men had done their bloody work.
3. In West European countries, too, numerous trials took place against those who had "administered" and oppressed Nazi-occupied countries, or been commanders of concentration camps located there. In this connection, mention should be made of verdicts pronounced in France, Belgium, Holland, Norway, Denmark, Italy, and Greece. So far, no figures have been assembled on this score, but we may be sure that justice was done there too.
4. The Military tribunals set up by the three Western Allies in Germany after the war for the trial of Nazi criminals, as we now know, pronounced sentence on 5,025 persons, 806 of whom were sentenced to death. In turn, 486 of these, more than half, were executed, including the Nuremberg war criminals.
5. As I know from my own activity in the denazification process, German courts during the early post-war years were not able, or only to a very limited degree, to try Nazi criminals, because the Allies reserved these cases almost entirely for themselves. Only with the establishment of the Federal Republic and the conclusion of the Bonn Conventions of 1954 was the German judicature able to take on fully the prosecution of Nazi criminals. This was particularly difficult in the beginning as the most important documents were still in Allied hands, and because it was especially difficult, during those first turbulent years, to reach surviving witnesses who were essential for such trials.

Still, German judicature pronounced the high number of 5,445 legal verdicts between May 8, 1945, and January, 1964, with 12 death sentences among them (that could not, however, be carried out because the 1949 Constitution abolished the death penalty). I therefore believe that the charge that German judicature did nothing to clean up the German scene, can really not be maintained.

Did these convictions in East and West, by Allied military tribunals and German courts, bring all or nearly all Nazi criminals to justice? This question may well be answered negatively, even though everyone must admit that a great deal of justice was done in this fashion. In the course of a trial in Ulm in 1958, it emerged that many of the crimes committed in the concentration camps and by the "Special Groups" had not yet been prosecuted or adjudicated.

The German judiciary therefore established a center in the town of Ludwigsburg, exclusively charged with examining and uncovering crimes committed in concentration camps and so-called "Special Actions" outside the Federal Republic. With "German thoroughness," this center during the past six years reconstructed, on paper, all those places of horror where human beings were tortured and killed, and also the organizations set up to commit such mass murder; and it attempted to find the names of all those involved in these crimes, so that subsequently the regular courts could prosecute.

So far, the Ludwigsburg center has pieced together no fewer than 640 such "complexes" (of which, incidentally, the Auschwitz trial now taking place in Frankfurt is one). All these "complexes" encompass one or more participants who are known by name, and a criminal dossier was prepared in the case of every one of them. Involved in these 640 "complexes," are certainly several thousand suspects with whom the German courts will have to deal in the years to come.

With this I return to the frequently so thoroughly misunderstood effects of the statute of limitations. German Law provides, this is generally not known, that every statutory limitation can be interrupted by a simple action on the part of a judge: the statutory period then begins anew. What does that mean in practice?

If the Ludwigsburg center forwards the dossier of a suspect to a regular court, and the judge merely makes a notation in the papers, such as: "The investigation is to be continued. Mueller, District Judge"; the statutory limit is automatically set aside and the case runs for another 20 years.

Therefore the statutory limitation is interrupted as regards those under suspicion by the Ludwigsburg center, regardless of whether it is known that they are still alive, where they live, or whether they live somewhere under an assumed name, and the statute of limitations will not apply to them as of next May, but only 20 years after its interruption.

Thus, this large number of persons will be excluded from the statute, so that justice can proceed unhampered in their cases.

Finally, the German Federal Republic went to extra lengths on November 20, 1964, when it launched an appeal to the entire world asking everyone, individuals, organizations or governments, to make available to the Ludwigsburg center (Zentralstelle der Landesjustizverwaltung zur Aufklaerung national-sozialistischer Gewalttaten, Ludwigsburg, Schorndorfer Strasse 28) any documents, photostats, microfilms or other information containing names of Nazi criminals so far not known to legal authorities of the Federal Republic.

There are still four months to go before the statute takes effect, unless the statute is previously stayed by juridical action. This is further guarantee that no one will escape justice.

If we sum up objectively all measures so far taken against the Nazi criminals, such as the trials in the East European countries, the trials in Western Europe, the sentences the Allied Military Tribunals, the convictions by German courts, the investigation efforts by the Ludwigsburg center that lead to an interruption of the statutory limitation in thousands of cases, and finally the appeal by the Federal Republic to the world to provide information on any Nazi criminals who have so far remained unknown, then one may confidently conclude that after May 8, 1965, there will by no means be hundreds or thousands of war criminals who will roam the streets of Germany and jeeringly point to the statute as protection against punishment.

In spite of all this, the theoretical possibility still remains, that one or the other of the culprits, if he was never named in any context nor pointed out by an accusing witness, might, under the shelter of the statute, dare to show himself again. Theoretically, I say; for in practice such a case is very improbable after all the lists of names of the concentration camp guards and the "Special Groups" have been combed, and so many convictions obtained.

But it must be admitted that, theoretically, the possibility remains and therefore, in my personal opinion, this possibility should also be blocked. It is not impossible, for example, that the authorities in the Soviet-occupied zone of Germany have some such cases in their files, in order to bring them out only after May 8, 1965. They most certainly would not do that to help justice triumph, but to capitalize on it politically to the detriment of the Federal Republic. Should the zonal authorities fail, now, after the appeal by the Federal Republic, to release such information, they would thereby protect Nazi criminals.

What can be done to prevent abuse of the statute in the few theoretically possible cases, if there should be such cases at all?

It is surely understandable that people in Germany are reluctant to change the constitution because of these few possible cases, a change which in the opinion of some jurists would be necessary in order to extend the time limits of the statute. Other jurists, however, are of the opinion that no constitutional change would be required, but merely a normal legislative act. In any event, the debate over the closing of this last small gap is not yet ended.

A few days ago the German Parliament charged the Federal Government with the task of presenting a full report before March 1, 1965, on the extent to which National-Socialist crimes of violence have been solved, prosecuted and punished. Parliament will then draw its conclusions from that report and take measures to close the last gap through which a Nazi criminal might slip.

For, as I said in the beginning, it is the firm intention of Germany's political leadership to prevent this and to assure that particularly in cases of National-Socialist acts of violence justice will take its course unhampered.

THE POWER OF THE KASHRUT CERTIFICATE

During the recent commemoration of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the director of the department of international affairs of the World Jewish Congress, Dr. Maurice Perlzweig, stated that "the time has come when the international community must reaffirm in clear and unequivocal terms the right of every religious community to order its own life in freedom, irrespective of the political or economic structure of the regime under which it lives."

There are few countries where this thought is as cogent as in Israel where the entrenched Orthodox Rabbinate has consistently repressed the views and observances of other religious or non-religious Jewish denominations. The current controversy between the Rabbinate and the Israel Hotel Association is a case in point.

The Dan Carmel Hotel had been in strict compliance with the dietary regulations laid down by the Rabbinate, to the extent of placing three Rabbinical supervisors on its payroll. Yet the Rabbinate, repeatedly frustrated in its attempts to railroad the restrictive Sabbath Law through the Knesset, resorted to the withdrawal of the Kashrut certificate in order to impose its narrow version of Sabbath observance on the Dan Carmel. By manipulating a religious trust for the advancement of its own political ends, the Rabbinate has once again abused the authority vested in it by the Jewish public.

But then the Kashrut license has always been the Rabbinate's favorite weapon. For hadn't it proven its effectiveness in blocking hall rental to Reform congregations in Kfar Shmaryahu and Ramat Gan? in forcing Israel hotel and food industries into packing its payrolls with disproportionate numbers of Rabbinical agents? in coercing El-Al, Zim, and a number of other national enterprises into surrender of Israel's economic interests to the Rabbinate's every whim?

Restriction of tourist facilities and freedom of movement is bad business in a country which depends heavily on the tourist trade as a source of foreign currency. It indicates a lack of international courtesy everywhere. Above all, however, the enforcement of the sectarian requirements of one segment of the community upon the entire public constitutes a gross violation of freedom of conscience and religion. The very freedom which Israel, as a member of the United Nations, a signatory of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, and by virtue of its own Declaration of Independence, has pledged to protect.

The above statement came to the Canadian Jewish Review from Dr. Alex Hershaft, Secretary of the American Friends of Religious Freedom In Israel, of Washington, D.C.

The following statement, which appeared in the Jerusalem Post, also came from the American Friends of Religious Freedom In Israel, in Washington:

THE LEAGUE FOR THE ABOLISHMENT OF RELIGIOUS COERCION ACCUSES THE RABBINATE!

We accuse the Rabbinate of misusing its authority.

The Rabbinate is exploiting its right to grant "kashrut certificates" to impose all kinds of demands irrelevant to matters of kashrut. Hotels and restaurants that apply for a "kashrut certificate" are obliged not only to observe the dietary laws of "kashrut" and to employ special supervisors, but also to undertake:—

Not to allow their guests to smoke or write on Shabbat in the public rooms; Not to allow any music or dancing on Shabbat; Not to receive any payments on Shabbat, etc. etc.

Thus the Rabbinate tries to coerce the public to behave in accordance with its dictates and to impose its "Shabbat Atmosphere" on everybody.

The Rabbinate's tactics are obvious: Without the Rabbinate's certificate the hotels and restaurants will lose the strictly observant clientele (though few in number), wedding receptions, and official government banquets [!]. The threat of this financial loss will make hotel and restaurant owners give in to the Rabbinate's demands.

Thus the "kashrut certificate" is being exploited for religious coercion! This is a form of blackmail!

Hotel and Restaurant Owners!

Do not let the Rabbinate coerce you into accepting restrictions which are against your will and convictions, which are a nuisance to your guests, and which interfere with efficient and successful management! Do not let the "kashrut certificate" become a medal for "good behaviour" awarded by the Rabbinate!

WHY is the certificate awarded to one hotelier and refused to another, although the former has a band playing on his premises on Shabbat?

WHY is there a strict insistence on all the conditions at one establishment and not at another?

WHY is every local rabbi a Shabbat Law unto himself?

Do not compete with each other as to who can be on best terms with the Rabbinate for the sake of being awarded a certificate!

Renounce the Rabbinate's "kashrut certificate"!

Keep a kosher kitchen — without a certificate, or do not keep a kosher kitchen, and advertise this openly. (Guests who demand food with the Rabbinate's certificate may be given such food parcels and special utensils like those given to passengers on ships and planes.)

The Israeli public will appreciate your stand!

The time has come to clap the racket of the "kashrut certificate."
